Announce Celebration Program

FOURTH GAME OF WORLD'S SERIES AT CLEVELAND TODAY

Belle Vernon Citizens Are Making Fight

Some weeks ago the citizens of North Belle Vernon held a public meeting to protest against the action of the school board in refusing to pay the transportation charges of the scholars who were going to Monessen High school because the board had discontinued their own High school. The citizens were in dead earnest about the matter and went at the problem in a business like way. After discussing the situation, the chairman of the meeting appointed a committee to find out whether or not the board had to pay the transportation charge or not. They did not write to other districts but went direct to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction Thomas E. Finegan. This letter of inquiry was sent on June 11th and the reply sent on June 14. This letter reads as follows:

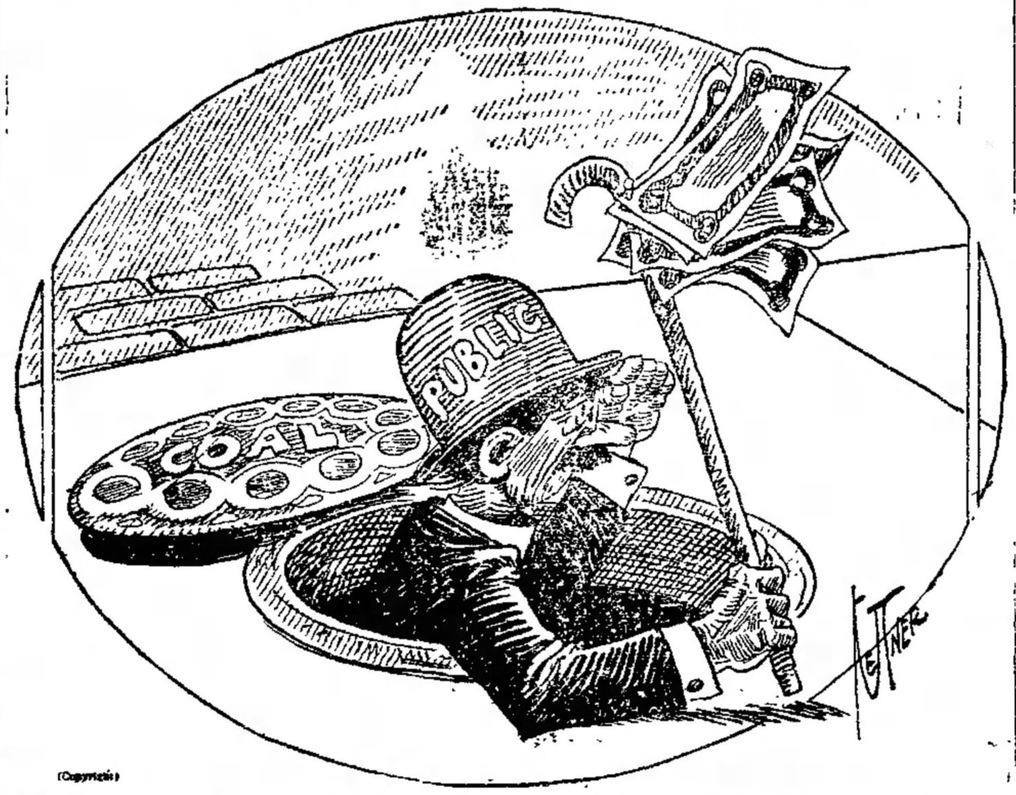
Your letter of June 11th is at hand. State Superintendent Finegan has ruled that "proper free transportation to and from school, including high school, must be provided by the district for all pupils of compulsory age who reside more than two miles from a school by the nearest public highway.

The courts have already decided that if a pupil shall have completed the work of the elementary schools before he is 16 years of age, he shall continue his education in the high school until he has reached his 16th year, the end of the compulsory attendance period.

Very truly yours,
W. M Denison.

The committee wants those who signed the petition to see that their duties have been attended to. The next step will be to confer with the school board and see what their intentions are. Then if they still refuse to pay the transportation it will be up to the citizens to authorize the committee to proceed with a suit. The letter from the department is so plain that it is to be hoped the matter will be amicably settled before long.

No Relief in Sight



BIG PROGRAM OF EVENTS SCHEDULED FOR CELEBRATION HERE ON COLUMBUS DAY

With the town taking on a holiday attire, greater interest is being manifested in the monster celebration, to be held Tuesday, in honor of Columbus Day. Flags and bunting streams from almost every pole along Donner and Schoonmaker avenue and many of the business houses are gaily decorated in the National colors, while it is expected that every place along the route of the parade will be be decorated by the morning of the celebration.

The program for the day has been fully arranged and indicates that from early morning until late at night there will not be a dull moment and the thousands of visitors who come here for the day will be royally entertained. At 6:30 in the morning reville will be sounded by a salute of mammoth bombs and at 9 o'clock two bands will make their appearance on the streets marching up and down and giving concerts at various sections of the town. At ten o'clock the festivities will be transferred to Page Park where an athletic program has been arranged for old and young with prizes for the winners in all contests.

The monster parade with half a dozen bands and several thousand marchers, will start promptly at one thirty and promises to be the big attraction of the day with a huge float. Many visiting organizations accompanied by their bands will be in line. During the parade daylight fireworks will add to the occasion.

Immediately after the parade, prominent orators will speak at Page park to the assemblage. Included in the list of speakers for the day are Hon. Curtis H. Gregg of Greensburg, Judge J. S. Beacom, of Greensourg, Attorney J. T. Bell of Pittsburgh and F. Pisani of this city. Following the speaking, the Italian Citizens band of this city will give a concert at the park and a foot ball game will be staged between the Keystones of this city and the American Legion team of Brownsville. At seven o'clock the famous Nerilla band of Pittsburgh will give a concert at Page park with novelty attractions during the concert. The Easton Children of Pittsburgh will entertain with songs and dances.

At eight o'clock the fireworks display will start and a $2,000 display will be given. Music will be furnished during the display and the day will be brought to a close with the concert and several dances that have been arranged in various halls throughout the town.

The order of the parade will appear in Monday's paper.

To Prosecute For Failure to Attend School

Strict enforcement of the Compulsory Attendance Law in the local public schools is being maintained by the local Attendance Officer, who during the past two weeks has caused the arrest of five parents, who persistently refused to send their children to school in compliance with the law. The Department of Public Instruction compels the Attendance Officer to strictly enforce the provisions of the law requiring all children between the ages of eight and sixteen years to attend every school day unless he can present a legal excuse for his absence and on checking up the records daily, it is found that quite a number of local parents are violating the law by keeping their children from school. Notice has been served on a number and while some have complied with the law and sent their children to school, there are yet a number who have refused to pay attention to the notice and will be prosecuted.

The five parents already arrested and fined under the provisions of the law are Alexander Tyzinsky, who neglected to send his boy not yet sixteen years of age, to school; John Suzinka who kept his 14 year old girl for work at home; John Hulkus, who refused to make his 15 year old daughter attend school and paid a fine, has again refused to comply with the notice and will be re-arrested and compelled to pay a much larger fine. Eddie Lee Page, colored, paid a fine because his 11 year old daughter did not want to attend school and the parents refused to compell her, and Mike Ousina suffered accordingly on the same offense for his 14 year old daughter.

The Attendance Officer has no alternative under the law, other than to make the arrest when due notice has been served and it is not a personal matter, but a law of the state for the welfare of the child and the state.

Big Game On

By HENRY FARRELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Cleveland, O., Oct. 9.---Cleveland's Indians smeared on war paint today, took up their tomahawks, and started out.

Unmindful of the fact that Brooklyn was the favorite credited with two games to one for the world series flag, the tribe of Big Chief Speaker, hearing the cries from the home town wigwams, "you can do it" were ready for the task of overcoming the advantage of the Robins.

While the fans thronged outside the gates waiting to pay their toll for the first world game, this Ohio city has ever seen, Speaker and his tribe of warriors were in a pow-wow deciding how it could best be done.

The general impression was that the task of evening the count would be delegated to the spitball hand of Stanley Coveleskie.

Pitching selections were rather doubtful as far as Brooklyn is concerned.

"I haven't decided," was the tense comment of Uncle Robby, Shepherd of the Robins.

However, the impression grew that Rube Marquard, veteran of five baseball classics, would make another effort to win. Some picked Al Mamaux as the logical starter on the strength of his showing as a relief hurler in the first game. Others doped that Jeff Pfeiffer, the fast ball artist of the Robins, would get the call.

But it is all a matter of conjecture. Both Speaker and Robinson, with the idea in mind of foiling the gamblers, refused to commit themselves definitely.

Where interest in the series was lax in Brooklyn, the general enthusiasm was evident here

All seats for the park were sold in Brooklyn, and they are here---but Cleveland talks baseball and Brooklyn didn't. Nothing but baseball was heard in the hotel lobbies, on the streets and other nooks where the fans gathered.

Everyone was enthused over the chances of the Indians to equal the feat of the Cincinnati Reds and bring another world's series flag to Ohio. Cleveland fans were disposed to ignore the Indians' reverses in the east and were banking upon a spurt on the home lot to fulfill their dreams of a decade.

Moscow Rebellion

New York, Oct. 9---John Mohwalaki believes he can convince the court he had a right to threaten his mother in law. She called me "it" and "that" he said.

Receive Scores

Foot ball and base ball fans occupy the front ranks today with the world series at Cleveland, the Pitt-West Virginia game at Pittsburgh and the local High school team clashing with the Carnegie Tech Freshmen team here.

Full account of the base ball game will be received by innings at the Independent office over the United Press Wire and in addition the progress of the Pitt-West Virginia and Carnegie Tech-Westminster foot ball contests will be announced. At the close of the big collegiate football contests all scores will be received and posted at the Independent office or phone 53 during the afternoon.

Hope for Gusher

A good supply of gas, enough to supply the surrounding territory, was struck this morning at well No. 2, of the Turkey Hollow Oil and Gas company on the W. S. Martin farm The gas was struck in the Big Injun sand at a depth of 1600 feet, but drilling will continue in hopes of striking a gusher.

Diamond Theft

(By United Press)

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 9.---Two hundred thousand dollars worth of set diamonds were stolen from Max Lowenthal, 35, of Buffalo, agent for the Pump Present Co., wholesale jewelers of Rochester, N. Y., by two men early today. Lowenthal had just alighted from a street car on his way home with the diamonds in two suit cases when he was attacked.

After knocking Lowenthal down with the butts of their revolvers, the robbers jumped into the taxicab from which they alighted and drove away. Clarence Miller, driver of the taxi, was commanded, at the point of a revolver to drive them to the corner of Delaware and Chippewa streets. Believing them to be strangers in the city, Miller said, he turned off at another street intersection and stopped the taxicab in front of the Pearl street station. He jumped out and ran into the station to notify the police, but the robbers escaped.

Shortly afterward it was reported to police that two men were said to have thrown a suitcase into a vacant lot on the East Side of the city. Police went to the lot and found the suitcase, which bore Lowenthal's initials. It contained two or three diamond rings which evidently had been overlooked, he told police he believed the robbers had followed him from Chicago where he had obtained the diamonds. He said most of the diamonds were set in platinum and were valued at $200,000

Neither Lowenthal nor Miller, the taxi driver could give a good description of the bandits to the police.

Private Bank Closed

(By United Press)

Boston, Oct. 9---The Chelsea Exchange bank, a private bank was closed today by Bank Commissioner Allen who said it was unable to meet demands.

Good Program

In addition to the boxing bouts at the Moose smoker tonight, W. M. Quinn, an able lecturer from New York will speak of Monessen as he finds it. F. F. Flanigan will also give his views along similar lines. This, of course, will be very interesting to the many Moose, who will be glad to know that even the big city folks don't figure Monessenites live in the sticks. These men are interested in what was the Page plant. They, together with many of the old standbys, are ever ready to keep the bunch on edge and from a social, athletic or progressive standpoint. Boxing will begin at 8 p. m. sharp. The program as previously announced will begin at 7 p. m. Everybody is assured a full night's entertainment. Come early and stay late, is the wish of the committee.

Birthday Party

A very enjoyable time was spent Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugo on Felgar on First street in honor of Mrs. Felgar's sister-in-law, Mrs. Robert Gibson's birthday. The evening was passed in games, music and dancing. At 11 o'clock a plate lunch was served by Mrs. B. Felgar, assisted by Mrs. C. A. Fenton and Mrs. Frank McElroy. The out of town guests were John Smith of Allegheny, George Day and Miss Winifred Hall of Charleroi, Miss Golda Smith, Donora, William Beaton, Belle Vernon. At about 12 o'clock the guests departed for their homes wishing the hostess many many more happy birthdays.

Fog Steps Aviator

Word has been received from Akron, Ohio, that Ralph Rice, the aviator who had left Long Island, New York, on a flight as far as Chicago, where he expected to make stops and be made flying the journey possible. He expects to "hop off" as soon as weather conditions permit and may arrive in this city tomorrow.

Marquard Arrested

(By United Press)

Cleveland, Oct. 9---Police Chief Smith announced today that "Rube" Marquard, pitcher for the Brooklyn National League team, had been arrested for ticket scalping at noon today. One of the Cleveland police arrested Marquard in the Winton hotel when he attempted to sell a set of tickets for the four games for $200. When Marquard was taken to the police station he plead to be released in order that he could play this afternoon if needed and his request was granted, but he will be arraigned Monday.

More Reprisals

(By United Press)

[illegible], Oct. 9---A large body of police surrounded the Odd Fellows hall this morning after shooting into the [illegible] had been secretary Lombardo to the window and set the building on fire. They prevented firemen from entering the structure until it was in ashes. It is thought this was done as a reprisal for the killing of [illegible] in a clash yesterday.

Coal Supply Insured

Washington, Oct. 9---Two divisions of the government were in action today to insure a supply of coal for domestic consumers throughout the country and to keep the prices down.

Under special new orders of the interstate commerce commission all railroads east of Montana and Wyoming were rushing every available coal car to the mines to increase production.

Acting on direct orders from Attorney General Palmer, District Attorney and special agents in all big cities were collecting evidence of alleged profiteering by coal dealers. The evidence will be presented to grand juries under the Lever anti-profiteering law before October 18, Palmer said.

Palmer's investigation is being directed especially to learn why anthracite coal prices were jumped between $1 and $2 a ton. Neither the recent anthracite miners' strike nor the wage increases granted the miners seem to justify the increase, officials said here today.

Cleveland, Columbus, Detroit, and cities in Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and Kentucky are intended to receive especial benefit under the new orders special benefit under the new orders ston. The orders are intended to lay down 2,100 cars of coal a day in these states.

Great Day at "State"

State College, Pa., Oct. 9.---More than 10,000 alumnae, students and visitors were here today to attend the state college monster home-coming and witness the annual Dartmouth-Penn State football classic.

Gov. Sproul arrived this morning to take part in the exercises. He will view the game from the state College stands in the afternoon and at night will speak at the alumnae smoker, which will be the largest get-together affair in the history of the college.

More than 1,200 almunae were here to participate in the celebration. Every effort to accommodate the graduates and enliven their stay has been made by the students. Fraternities are holding open house for the grads. Class reunions were held at alumnae headquarters where class booths have been provided.

Fire Insurance a Necessity

Gov. William C Sproul has issued a sweeping statement urging all citizens of the state to observe this day as Fire Prevention Day. He points out the staggering loss of human life and property as the result of fire and implores the people to use every safeguard against a repetition of this awful toll.

Think of $20,000,000 worth of property destroyed in one year, to say nothing of the agony and suffering through injury and death. The educational campaign that has been wages this year through state departments, cities, towns and townships embracing the schools, will be the means of reducing this great hazzard and the effect will be seen in a very short time.

In calling attention to this subject which is vitally before the people of our state today, our solemn duty is with the people in our home town. Are we in Monessen doing all we can to prevent fire loss and thus save for the use of our people the housing facilities we now have. We have a great shortage as it is, but a destructive fire might work untold harm to our home owners.

In connection with the matter as it now stands, there is a question most vital to the individual home owner or business firm. Does your insurance cover the present day value of the property? If not the risk is too great to carry.. Some people have not changed their insurance in years. This should be done at once. Get out the insurance policy, take stock with yourself. Get an estimate today of the value of your home, your business property or business compare it with present day labor and material costs, then take the matter up with your agent and have him advise you. If you have no insurance, call up an agent today and protect yourself. A fire may mean the loss of your home, the loss of years of toil, it may bring poverty to your children after you are gone and forcing them to battle against the odds of the cold world.

Any agent on this page or any agent in town can properly advise you in matters of insurance, and don't delay the matter one day or one hour. Bring your insurance right up to date. After this is done, join in the state wide campaign to remove everything from your premises that might make a fire possible.

RE: Dodge Brothers Motor Vehicle Prices.

This will authorize you to answer all inquiries on the subject of possible changes in the prices of Dodge Brothers Motor Vehicles as follows:

"Dodge Brothers' policy has ever been to give true value for the price asked. At no time have they ever demanded an excess amount for their product. As in the past, they will continue in the future to demand a fair return for their efforts."

Long ago Dodge Brothers learned that their success would follow in direct proportion to the success of their dealers. Consequently they adopted the policy and have adhered to it, and shall continue to adhere to it strictly, that at no time shall they ever do anything that would be detrimental to their Dealers' best interests.

A Women's Soul Bared

Mrs. Asquith, Wife of Former British Premier, Tells Tales Out of School.

When William Watson, the famed poet, wrote "The Woman with the Serpent's Tongue," it was Margot Tennant Asquith he wrote about. As wife of the then Prime Minister of Great Britain, Mrs. Asquith acquired a knowledge of men and things that was denied to other women. Her "petticoat government" forced a crisis in the British navy, and she was the "power behind the throne" in many instances.

Now Mrs. Asquith has arrived at the conclusion that she is and has been a much-misunderstood woman. Happily, during her entire public career (and it was a public career) she kept a diary. Recently she concluded to give the contents of that diary to the public. Enngien! has already read what she had to say. Pittsburgh is to be next. The Pittsburg Dispatch has arranged for the entire diary and, beginning next Sunday, October 10, there will appear for 14 consecutive weeks a liberal installment of all the things Mrs. Asquith wrote.

Contained in this diary are matters of State, love, intrigue and common politics. The writer, whose pen might best be described as "vitriolic" spares no one. She knew well Gladstone, Edward VII, Rosebery, Balfour, Randolph Churchill, Kitchener, Lord Roberts and a host of other world famous figures. And she knows whereof she writes.

No matter whether you are of British origin or not you will be interested. This being the case, it is best to "play safe," and order your copy of next Sunday's Dispatch in advance. 1t

THE BEST ON EARTH

Says Mrs. Staples of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Taunton, Mass.—"I could not eat or sleep for six months, had fainting spells and could not walk without help for three months, caused by female trouble. My cousin, who was a doctor, told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped me greatly. Then during the change of Life I used the same remedy. I am seventy years old now and am able to do my own housework and walk one mile to church every Sunday morning and evening. I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to my friends having the same troubles as I had. Your remedy is the best on earth. I cannot find words to express my gratitude to it."—Mrs. SUSAN C. STAPLES, 157 B School St., Taunton, Mass.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such grateful letters is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and illness.

It has relieved women from some of the worst forms of female ills, such as displacements, inflammation, and ulceration. Why don't you try it?

Loving Plotters

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR

(©, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

The mother of Morton Dale entered his office, peered into his private room, found it vacant and turned her gaze upon his stenographer, Irene Blandon, with some wonderment. The latter, a handkerchief to her eyes and sobbing low, had not noticed her appearance. The sheet of paper on her typewriter bore evidence of tears.

"Why, Miss Blandon!" spoke the visitor gently, "whatever is the trouble? You are crying."

Irene lifted a woeful face to the lady. "I couldn't help it," she spoke. "You must know how things are here and I am so sorry for Mr. Dale."

"Perhaps I do not entirely know how things are here, dear," said Mrs. Dale. "Of course Morton has told me of his misfortune in trusting a client with half his capital and the man investing it unfortunately and no chance of recovering it. But Morton is young, bright and honorable, the world is all before him and it has greatly distressed me to see how hard he has taken it."

"Mr. Dale was under a severe strain before that came," announced Irene. "He put through a very creditable deal and counted on expanding his business when this loss came along. Oh, Mrs. Dale! can you not induce him to seek and find what alone can save him—an entire abandonment of business cares for a spell? He is not ill, but mentally depressed. He has lost his nerve, as the men on 'change say, and he gets gloomier and more discouraged every day. Perhaps you wonder at my feeling over him, but I came to the city knowing nobody and if I were his own sister he could not have been more kind and helpful to me. Every time I write to the family at home, I am sure they bless him for the interest he has taken in me and the good position he has given me."

"You are a sweet, dear girl," said Mrs. Dale, her own eyes dimming. "Tell me what you think we had ought to do to win him from his apathy and gloom."

"He must give up business for a time, that is sure," answered sensible, practical Irene. "He has a fine, sensitive nature and he is getting thin and tired all of the time. He needs building up, and oh! if he would only consent to go down to Waltham, where I came from, and let mother and the folks look after him and think of nothing but rest and recreation, he would surely come back with renewed health and courage."

The sincerity and earnestness of the young girl charmed the anxious mother. From the suggestion Irene made grew definite plans. Morton Dale agreed to them, though with little interest in them, it seemed, and one day left for a month's vacation at Hollywood farm. It was not until he got away from the turmoil and grime of the city and the train glided along past fresh vernal scenes and the flower perfumed air came in revivingly at the open car window, that his perturbed mind began to calm down. In a gentle, politic way those two loving plotters had spent a week in winning him to their suggestion. Now, feeling how reliably Irene would attend to his interests and recalling that she was sacrificing her own vacation visit to the folks at home for his sake, a tender gratitude expanded his soul, temporarily clouded by his own selfish and exaggerated worries.

"She is like my mother—all gold!" Morton told himself, and when he arrived at Waltham he soon decided that there were others, too, of the homespun, but heartsome Blanden family who were eligibles to be quoted in the same precious metal category.

Irene's two sisters were in evidence occupying a seat in the roomy old sitting room, pictures of health and joliness. The brother, a big-hearted fellow, always joking and laughing, hailed Morton as a lesson friend. When they reached the pleasant old-fashioned farmhouse Mrs. Blandon welcomed their guest as an own son. The guest partook of the most enjoyable meal of weeks and slept with a smile on his lips, as through his dreaming fancies ran shadowy echoes of some joke Wilfrid Blandon narrated, or a fugitive thought of the brave little helper he had left in charge of his business craft came to his mind.

Bluff, hearty Wilfred put himself out to bring a more cheerful state of feeling to the invalid, and was abetted by trusty accomplices. He even had the scale at the general store manipulated, so that whenever Morton came in to get weighed he was found to be gaining nearly a pound daily. One day some ruffians attacked a farmer on his way home with considerable money. Morton dispersed them in a way that won from the rescued victim glowing commendation for his spryness and strength.

At the end of a month, completely renovated, Morton Dale came home, the picture of jolly good health. He listened with glowing eyes as his mother recited how Irene had not only cared for the old business, but had secured considerable new, and through her labors there was a hope of getting back some of the lost capital.

"I can never repay all she has done for me," spoke Morton gratefully. "Why has she taken such an interest in my affairs, mother?"

"Why?" repeated Mrs. Dale promptly. "Ask her, Morton, and she will blush, as I imagine no one love, you know."

"Then I shall try the experiment at once!" cried Morton hopefully.

GLORY DESTROYED BY TIME

Of the Once Mighty Cities of Babylon and Nineveh Hardly a Vestige Remains.

When the ancient kingdom of the Assyrians fell through effeminacy and negligence 300 years after the Trojan war, many petty states arose out of its ruins, two of which raised themselves to a high degree of power. The kings of Media subdued the mountain land of Persia, and established relations of amity with hordes that wandered on the eastern side of the Caspian sea; they conquered also a portion of the empire which had centered in Nineveh. At the same time the king of Babel, or Babylon, flourished with still greater magnificence and power.

In Babylon, ancient seat of learning and science, Nabopolassar, after a long period of anarchy and division, erected a most powerful monarchy, whose sceptre Nebuchadnezzar, his son, extended from the Caucasus mountains, where he defeated the Iberians, to the sandy deserts of Lybia. He burnt Jerusalem; defeated Ammon, Moab and Edom; conquered Tyre, the richest city of the Phoenicians; laid waste Egypt, and formed his empire on new boundaries. He adorned Babylon, the city of his residence, with the noblest works of architecture, but of this city the ruins are scarcely discernible. It is still more difficult to trace the vestiges of Nineveh, which lie a three days' journey from it, and whose ruins have sunk in the marshy soil.

Uncovered Ancient Grave.

While excavations were being made on a small conical-shaped hill near Dolphinton station, England, in preparation for the foundation for a monument, the workmen came upon an irregularly shaped stone measuring about four feet four inches square and six inches thick, which was found to be covering ancient human remains in their place of sepulchre. Flagstones about four inches thick line the grave, which measures three feet nine inches by two feet by two feet. The stones are recognized as having been quarried locally. The grave was situated only about two feet six inches from the surface, and the deceased person had evidently been interred with legs drawn up. The stones have been replaced.

EDITH MAY

The prettiest salesgirl in America—Miss Edith May Leuenberger. She's a real American girl, thru and thru, and you'll like her the minute you get to know her well. Judges in a national beauty contest picked Edith May. Many thousands of salesgirls, the country over, entered the contest. Never before did a nation realize that it had such a fine collection of "prettiest girls." Edith May won.

Edith May is a girl any father, or mother, or brother or husband would like to have around the house. For she is a "regular" girl. She lives in Monroe, Wis., where there are no beauty shops, and where, as Edith May says herself, "The chances are limited." Not on the city's boulevards lived this prettiest girl! not in a gilded palace, not clothed in priceless silks and laces. Edith May is a daughter of the village blacksmith and works in a store. She improves the theory that a pretty girl naturally inclines to idleness. "I'm ready to work like a switch engine," she said. A switch engine is the superlative of rapid and long continued action.

Edith May has never seen a Parisian frock, nor a Fifth avenue hat. The world of jewelry is to her unknown. And yet, Edith May has been pronounced the prettiest salesgirl in America.

But the best part of this whole hunt for the prettiest salesgirl is that so many thousands of girls so nearly the peer of Edith May in beauty, disposition, character and ambition were found.

SIMPLIFYING PRODUCTION

A big woolen company that recently announced lower prices, is going to produce this year only about 70 patterns of goods, instead of 400 to 500 as formerly. No doubt it will save a good deal of money by simplifying production.

The public pays a high price to get the choice of a wide range of styles. If factories run along on a few standard patterns, they can turn out those patterns by quantity production. But if they have to change over from one pattern to another so as to get variety, it adds to the cost. Also they have to take the risk that patterns will go out of style, and they must sell the product at a price that will compensate them for such changes.

Many producers feel that they can attract trade only by showing fetching novelties. The principal novelty the consumer is looking for now is a low price. He will put up with a lot of monotony in pattern in order to get it.

INDIFFERENT WORKERS

There are some people who take no interest in their work, and spend much of their time looking at the clock. During the rush times prevailing some months ago, such folks could get a job and keep it. If the employer did not like them, he could get some one else. The employe was confident he could get another job alright.

The time when that sort of thing would go has passed. Employers are looking their help over, and those who made a record as loafers are likely to have an extended rest period.

This is a working world. He who will not work shall not eat, says the Bible. While no one will be allowed to starve, the lazy do not fare at all well.

SATISFYING WORK

In a certain army camp there was perpetual trouble with the men detailed to look after the horses. Many of them did not like the work and did things wrong to get out of it, and some of them were badly missed elsewhere. There was constant change and no one seemed to be satisfied.

Then the psychologist was consulted, and he picked for the work a squad of the least intelligent men in the camp. The experiment worked; for those men loved the horses and liked the routine of looking after them under supervision, and often they were as glad to get away from other work as their former supervisors were to get rid of them. Everyone was satisfied, and the horses were well looked after.

A person's work is a large part of life, and anyone is lucky who can earn a decent living at work that suits his taste and is neither too hard nor too easy for his powers.

Naturally the political campaign drags a little, as the politicians are holding on to their most damaging charges until about four days before election, when it will be too late to answer them....

Many people who kick on high prices of building material, will go out in the woods this fall and set fires that burn up great quantities of timber.

The present hours of labor are not reported to help out the alarm clock business.

Tunnel Work Progressing

(By United Press)

Pittsburgh, Oct. 8—Work is progressing slowly on the 5,700 foot tunnel that is to make shorter the distance from the South Hills suburbs to the business section of Pittsburgh. The contract calls for completion by June 17, 1922, but engineers estimate more than four years will be required to reach completion at the present rate of construction.

The bore is through sandstone and shale. The double tube is 26 feet wide and 20 feet high. Advance is made almost entirely by dynamite blasting.

TO ERECT TABLETS

(By United Press)

Pittsburgh, Pa., October 8—Societies active in preserving the early history of Pittsburgh have decided to erect tablets commemorative of speeches by Abraham Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt and the Prince of Wales on the balconies of the historic Monongahela House here. The tablets, which will be of bronze, are to be placed at the spot the notables stood in delivering their respective addresses.

MAPS FOR SPORTSMEN

(By United Press)

Harrisburg, Oct. 8—The Department of Forestry has made arrangements to obtain from the state printer 5,000 lithographed maps of the new forest areas for distribution this month.

The maps are compiled especially for sportsmen and recreationists who visit the state forests. They are arranged for each of the new districts so that any one or all may be obtained.

It was hoped that they would be ready for the hunting season which commenced the latter part of September.

YOUNG GIRL TO GRADUATE

New Castle, Oct. 8—An infant prodigy is reported to be Miss Betty Jane Hamilton, 11 years old, who will graduate from the New Castle High School next spring. She entered the public schools at the usual age, 6 years, but will complete her intermediate course ... less than 7 years.

Bety Hamilton's brother, Edward Moore Hamilton, is said to be in a similar class with his sister when it comes to boning for examinations. He is leading the sophomore class in general intelligence at Westminster College at the age of 15 years.

The Scarecrow

By RALPH HAMILTON

(By Edgar Western Newspaper Union)

It seemed to Miss Mary Burton that she had reached the very height of earthly felicity when she became the sole owner of a home of her own. For fifteen years she had taught school, carefully saved her money and now at thirty-five with a paid up annuity policy bringing her forty dollars a month she had settled down amid beauty and comfort.

The house was very pleasantly arranged and there was a two acre garden. This latter had been neglected and Miss Burton had great ideas of improving it as she accumulated the money to do so. An orphan niece, Myra Davis, had come to live with her, bringing the furnishings of two rooms, inherited from her mother. The arrangement was that Myra should assist about the house, and if they could get a little fancy work to do they would join in this feature of increasing their income.

"The first thing we must do is to get that old chicken yard in order," said Myra. "It will take about fifty yards of poultry netting to patch up the old fence and a new gate must be made for it. There's laying boxes to get for the chickens, too, and the inside shed ought to be whitewashed. You'll leave all that to me, won't you, Aunty?"

Miss Burton was fully agreeable to this arrangement. Her own hobby about the place was a cherry tree that occupied the center of the garden. "It bore for the first time last year," a neighbors told me," she said to Myra. "There was only a little fruit then, but this will be a good year for it. All my life I've longed to be able to put up fruit raised by my own hands."

So Miss Burton sprayed the tree and watched the buds grow into little green globes and cleaned and polished some old fruit jars and made great preparations for the harvesting of her treasures.

Meantime Myra lived in a sort of elysium of delight. Her forte was making things spick and span and keeping them so. She was trying to straighten, stretch and attach a roll of poultry wire to posts one afternoon when a young man of about twenty two came along. He was rolling a lawn mower and had a small canvas bag, evidently containing tools.

"Just let me save you time and trouble, young lady," he spoke briskly. "You've got too pretty fingers to scratch and mash up with such rough work. Using nails? Oh, that won't do! Here's what you need for tacking and holding wire," and he took from his kit a box containing u shaped bands.

Myra liked his face and manner—anybody would, for he was all smiles and good nature. He looked as if he would feel hurt if she declined his help, but she said, "We are doing most of the work around here, Aunty and myself. We haven't got much money."

"Oh, that won't be work for me," declared the young man. "I've got a little leisure. Now then, you take this awl and hold the wire true while I nail. That's it. Famous! Just getting ready to make a farm of the place, eh? I'm picking up a sort of temporary living staying here for a week or two. I know something about garden work and if you don't mind I'll drop around once in a while and give you some points."

"Oh, if you would!" exclaimed Myra, and in her ingenuous way told of Miss Burton's agricultural ambitions. It led to her interested visitor telling her something about himself. His was a curious story. He gave her his name as Archie Lull, and related that he had come from another state where he had been in charge of a grain elevator for a wealthy relative. One day a handling produce buyer had quarreled with his wife in the elevator office and had struck her. All the manhood of Lull resented the brutality. He had given the man the trouncing of his life. The latter was influential and threatened to prosecute Lull to the limit.

"It was cowardly to run away," confessed Lull, "but I was tired of the monotonous job anyway, so I've sort of made myself a free."

He was a tireless worker, well informed, methodic and accommodating and he made Miss Burton many new friends. He won the heartiest appreciation of Miss Burton by putting up a scarecrow to keep away the robins and blackbirds from her precious cherries and currants.

In making the scarecrow Lull had used "an old coat of no earthly use," he declared. "You had to wear it in the straw just inside the cherry tree office." It was unsightly and did its work well. One day a new customer, he looked and came up to the [illegible]

UNABLE TO EXPLAIN GENIUS

Scientists of All Ages Have Admitted the Impossibility of Determining Whence It Comes.

Science "will admit" that it cannot explain genius, for genius simply is without explanation.

Handel was only seven when he insisted on following his father to the court of Saxe-Weissenfels, where he induced him to play on the organ in church after the service was over, persuaded his father to give him a chance. By the time he was nine he began to compose church service for use in the instruments and did so every week for three years.

[illegible] Handel was a tremendous performer. He ordered dinner for three at a hotel and when asked if he would wait for the others, replied: "I am the others, serve the dinner," and he ate all of it.

A story is told of Handel that while seated at dinner with some other musicians he exclaimed, "Oh, I have de tought!" Those about him feared that he go into another room and write down "de tought," lest they lose some wonderful composition. Handel did this several times, when one of the friends looked through the keyhole [illegible] not [illegible] hearing [illegible] gone out [illegible] another had sent him word to [illegible] not wish to share with the others.

When a singer complained to Handel that the style of his accompaniments distracted the attention of the hearers from the singer to the musicians and that if he did not accompany him better he would jump up on the harpsichord like a man of that time) and scream it. Handel replied: "Fine! Tell me when you are going to do that and I shall advertise it, for more people will come to see you jump than to hear you sing."

MOOSEHEART

Hidden away in the Fox River Valley, only a few miles from Chicago, stands one of the greatest democracies in the world. It is Mooseheart. Here may be found 800 children, who are being trained for better citizenship and who range in age from the toddling stage to that stage wherein they are ready to enter the world's work as competent, well trained men and women. Every one of these children is an orphan, whose father was a member of the Loyal Order of Moose. Their presence at Mooseheart answers the question which many men have asked themselves in the past and will ask themselves in the future. "What will become of my children if something happens to me?"

And this is the reason why the citizens of Monessen should be interested in the Loyal Order of Moose. The campaign for membership will only be open for a short time.

Through membership in the Moose organization numerous men here have successfully answered the great question of what will become of their children should anything happen to them. More are expected to answer this question in the same manner. But of course, membership in the Moose organization does not end with the benefits to the children through the advantages offered at Mooseheart, for the lodge has all the institutions and affairs that benefit the member himself and his family year in and year out.

Mooseheart is maintained entirely by the Moose. Since the institution was dedicated in 1913, more than three and one-half millions of dollars have been expended to provide adequate facilities for a home and a proper education, both academic and vocational, for these 800 children, and more will come in as years roll by. Children are admitted at all ages up to 14 and there are some families in which as many as seven children have been admitted to the home. Had it not been for the forethought of the fathers of these children, they would have been left in the world, probably without proper care and, in most cases become wards of the state.

How true is that Biblical maxim, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." That does not always apply simply to money or any material thing offered. The most precious thing one can give is a service. It may, and does in a great many instances, mean time, energy and thoughtfulness for the benefit of another. The Loyal Order of Moose is to be congratulated in putting this service so easily in reach of so many to exercise. It is such a rare privilege toward such a splendid cause, for Mooseheart is a school that trains for life.

In 1913, the ground upon which this great institution stands now, was 1,021 acres of bare and, with the monotony of the fields broken by only one building. Today there are more than one hundred buildings, integral parts of the Mooseheart home. Most of these are of steel and concrete construction. And others of the same type are in the course of construction. One of the latest buildings to be completed is the new assembly hall, which cost $270,000 to build. In connection with the large auditorium which the building contains, there are housing facilities for 1005 children. The auditorium has a capacity of 1,500 and is used for the purpose of assembling the children each day that they may conduct their business along legislative lines.

Mooseheart has the odd distinction of being probably the only school where self-government is put to practical use, hence the statement that it is one of the greatest democracies. A system of demerits has replaced the rod at Mooseheart. It is what they call there the honor system. The demerits are graded according to the severity of the offense. For instance, if a child is disobedient it may draw half a demerit. If a child is practically disagreeable in its obedience, the penalty may range from one to five demerits. Often the demerits are left entirely to the discretion of the children. It is at the assembly each day that these demerits are reported. Here the children make public confession to the shortcomings. They are required to stand up before their playmates here and report upon their merits, giving the number and cause of the demerits against them. It is when one realizes the difficulty of getting children to confess their sins to their own parents, that the full import of the system of fatherless and motherless youngsters admitting their guilt before their comrades is driven home.

Once a youngster draws five demerits he or she is placed in servitude upon the public work line. Moreover, assignments to the public work line means the denial of the privileges enjoyed by the other children. Members of the work line for instance, may not see their friends or relatives on Saturdays and Sundays. They have not the privilege of going to the city on the same days, they cannot enjoy the motion picture shows in the assembly hall and they cannot go boating, swimming or skating.

Periodically the children assemble to make regulations for the home and transact other business pertaining to the operation of the institution. This is one of the features of the self-government plan as it is worked out at Mooseheart. If a child so conducts itself as to merit severe censure by others, a jury is selected, a judge named and court trial is held. The finding of the jury is always adhered to and punishment, generally in the public work line, is administered.

There is no conventional garb for the children at Mooseheart, for the home maintains a regular department store for outfitting the 800 children there. They go to the man in charge of the store and select what they like. No two children are dressed exactly alike, for the store carries a stock in which there are virtually no duplications of the larger articles of dress.

Every article known to the household, including a line of staple and fancy groceries, is kept on the shelves of the department store. The shelves contain in addition all kinds of wearing apparel for boys and girls. The suits and dresses all are of different styles, goods and colors. All sizes of clothing are carried. The stock ranges from the little knit garments for babies to the buckskin boots for boys in their teens.

The strange part of the Mooseheart department store is not its stock, however, but the method employed in the sale of the stock. The children, at all ages, come to the store, with slips of paper which are requisition blanks. The requisition contains the name of the child, the article desired and the name of the matron or proctor in whose care the child is. There is no adult present to supervise the purchases. Its success depends solely upon pleasing the small shopper.

While there is no compulsory labor at Mooseheart outside the regular school hours a number of children who will admit they are "broke all the time" when it comes to money. This is instilled into the minds of the children, so that when there is work to be done, they are on hand to do it. Winter finds the boys shoveling snow and snow means work and work means money. In summer at Mooseheart there is grass to be raked and burned. But the education of a child along the lines of earning money does not end with the earning, for the children are taught with equal insistence, the necessity of "laying up for a rainy day." Generally the work pays the children at the rate of 30c per hour, although the younger children are not paid at such a high rate. Much depends on their ages and their ability to do the tasks which they voluntarily take up.

This work furnishes the basis for a banking system that involves Mooseheart alone. Accounts are kept and it is not unusual to see several children lined up at the teller's window with money to deposit, against one who has his bank book to draw money. Occasionally, however, some tousle haired tot with a burning desire for a lollypop will present his book at the window for five cents with which to purchase the article he desires.

Children under six years of age are not encouraged to work. At Mooseheart it is recognized that youngsters under six years of age should be allowed full time for play, a full measure for sunshine and plenty of fresh air. Above the age of six years, however, when thrift is encouraged, those who show a desire to earn a little money in their spare time are given much opportunity and offered varied inducements to turn this spare time into a bank account or in addition to a bank account already started. Since work is not compulsory, the earning capacity of a child is necessarily limited, but sometimes the children are so thrifty that they save a nice amount during the time they live at Mooseheart. For instance, Harold D. Taylor, of Montreal, Canada, accumulated nearly a thousand dollars through the sale of candy which he, himself made.

As the children enter Mooseheart, they come in first for a heart-to-heart talk with Matthew P. Adams, the superintendent, who is a great big American boy himself. After fifteen minutes' talk with a child, Mr. Adams has won a real pal for life.

Mooseheart's health precautions are most stringent. Rigid physical examinations are submitted to regularly by the children and when symptoms of disease appear, the children affected are sent at once to Dr. John D. Nichols, the physician for the home. There have been but seventeen deaths at Mooseheart since its dedication in 1913, and five of these deaths occurred during the influenza epidemic in 1918.

And during all this it might seem that routine education along academic lines is neglected. Far from it. Children between the ages of three and six years go to kindergarden, children between the ages of six and eleven years to go what is known as the academic divulsion, those between 11 and 14 years go to the academic and prevocational school, and those above the age of 14 years go to the high school. In the vocational training work shops are provided where the children may work to best advantage in obtaining their training for their life. Broadly speaking, the system of education at Mooseheart is little different from that of the public schools in cities, except for the Americanization course, which is carried in the Mooseheart curriculum.

Truly, Mooseheart is the end of the rainbow of idealism in the training of children. While it is called the school that trains for life, that is merely a broad description of the functions of Mooseheart. Essentially and in an education sense, Mooseheart is a school that trains for life. But, that, while of major importance, is by no means its most unique attribute.

Use the Gainaday Electric Washer-Wringer in your own laundry. The trial won't cost you a cent. Put in our regular job of washing. Throw in some extras, such as blankets, a rag rug or two, or your curtains. Give the Gainaday a job of washing you wouldn't dare to attempt yourself at one time, and watch it do it in an hour or two. All without real work on your part, without rubbing, without hand-wringing. A phone call brings you this remarkable machine.

Then Pay Only $10.00 Down

After this thorough trial after this demonstration of the things the Gainaday can do for you week after week--then pay the first $10.00 down. The balance can be paid in easy amounts; you can choose your own terms.

A Truly Remorkable Machine

It's hard to realize that all we say about the Gainaday can be true. It's hard to do it justice with "cold type".But when you see it operte--and we will instruct you fully, absolutely free--you'll be delighted with such features as the electric swinging wringer, automatic friction drive, roomy light-weight zinc cylinder, copper tub, handy switch button, etc., etc.

Made In Pittsburgh

This perhaps is far more important than you realize. The maker is one of your old reliable twenty-seven-year-old manufacturers--the Pittsburgh Gage & Supply Company--who stand squarely back of every machine.

EARLY DAYS OF THE CIRCUS

Methods by Which Rivals Fought Each Other Were Not Always Fair as Might Have Been.

In what we refer to as the "opposition days," says Mr. John Ringling in the American Magazine, circus life was full of thrills. It was real warfare against powerful enemies, a fight for existence on our part. When we had begun to grow and had established our policy of honesty and clean shows, the big fellows fought us hard.

One of their favorite tricks was to slip into our parade a wagon with large signs announcing that we were a nice little show, but that the big show was coming next week. It was a constant fight to prevent the wagon from getting into our parade. Once Charles Ringling quietly announced that he would give a five-dollar gold piece for each nut from it; and when it started to join our parade it fell to pieces like the "one-hoss shay." On another occasion some of our men sawed its timbers, so that at the first heavy jolt it collapsed in a heap. Another time, the opposition hid the objectionable wagon out in the country; but Charles learned which road it would take and fixed a bucket of green paint with a hose and force pump under a bridge. When it started to cross the bridge, our men pumped and squirted paint until all the lettering was obliterated.

Such unfair fighting never profited the opposition to any great extent. Indeed, it aroused sentiment in our favor. It is a question in my mind now whether it would not have been better policy to permit the wagon to parade with us and to rely upon the sense of fair play of the American public, but it was hard to see it in that light when we were fighting for existence.

EVER SYMBOLS OF RELIGION

Before the Days of Christianity Leaves of the Clover Plant Were Used as Illustrations.

Even in Druidic worship, in pre-Christian times, the trefoil leaves of the clover plant were symbols of religion, setting forth the three grades of Druids, Bards and Neophites. In Christian mythology its leaf is frequently held to symbolize the Trinity, and some Irish authorities insist that it is the true and original shamrock which St. Patrick used to illustrate how three separate objects, such as leaves, could be one.

The four-leaf clover is a freak growth, and the causes that produce it are heredity and nutrition. After a moist season clover plants with from four to seven leaves, and some having only two leaves, are found. Some plants are abnormal by heredity, and reproduce themselves with the same characteristics in successive years when their environment remains the same, external influences merely modifying the size of the leaves.

The four-leaf clover is everywhere held as an omen of good luck to the finder, partly on account of its rarity and partly because of its crosslike form. In Germany it is believed a four-leaf clover will overcome witchery, win love, guard one from danger when traveling, and secure a safe return, and if plucked on St. John's eve will enable the finder to work wonders in magic.

The North American Indians were divided into seven or eight great groups, according to their various languages. The Algonquins made up the largest family, comprising the eastern tribes of Canada and the United States south of Hudson bay, east of the Mississippi river and south to Virginia and Tennessee, including the Ojibwas, Ottawas, Crees, Algonquins and Blackfeet. The Iroquois or Five Nations of Cooper's stirring tales inhabited the east central states, including New York. West of them lived the Dakotas or Sioux, from Canada to Arkansas and from the Mississippi to the Rocky mountains. The Muskokis or Appalachians occupied the southeastern states as far west as the Mississippi; while the Shoshonis were at home in the region from Texas to Montana and from California to Idaho. The Athabascas, the Tinnas, and the Pueblos occupied Alaska and Canada, Oregon and New Mexico respectively.

Snake's Menace Mere Bluff.

A really accomplished reptile recently arrived in London in the shape of the American "hog-nosed snake." When approached by man, it acts in a most disturbing way, flattening part of its body and inflating an awesome hood like a cobra. If ever anything said: "I am death," it is the hog-nosed snake receiving a caller. As you get nearer its rage and menace increase, but one more step, and there is an anticlimax. The hood collapses, the snake "flops" to the ground, turns on its back and appears perfectly lifeless. Stir it with a stick, and it remains as limp as a piece of garden hose, but turn your back and it will crawl away. The two specimens now in the Zoological gardens, Regent's park, have gone through their "act" so often that they are too bored to repeat it for the present. The point of the joke is that the hog-nosed snake is perfectly harmless.

"1900 Cataract" Washer
Saves Time and Money and Really Washes Clothes

The "1900" Cataract Washer is so simple in design and construction that no knowledge of machinery or electricity is necessary to produce work of the finest quality.

Considering laundress costs you actually save enough in one year to more than pay for the machine.

Our liberal offer of monthly payments will make you the owner of this wonderful Electric Washing Machine and Wringer.

We also offer free trial and demonstrations.
